

Showing Family Love!

With Valentine's Day coming soon, the residents were asked if they would like to share two ideas of ways LOVE can be shown for your family. Some wanted to share how they showed love, while others wanted to give good suggestions for everyone to try.

Totty foster parent's 5 yr. old son, Blake H., says that he shows love to his family by wiping tears when he needs to, and likes giving hugs anytime.

Caiden W., age 3, gives great hugs and likes to tell his mom he loves her. His mom, Stefani loves to cuddle her children and feels its very important to tell them how much she loves them and appreciates them.

Leah D., age 14, simply says that giving a hug, and doing what is asked of you, are good ways to show love.

SPARK mom, Tanya S. finds that you can show love for your family by spending quality time with each other, such as playing games and talking together. She says that it is important to always be there for family, for big things and for small things.

Spark mom, Heather H., shares that she can learn to show more affection to her family to communicate love. She also says that it is loving to listen to a family member's point of view, while remembering that they want what is best for you.

Totty foster parent's 8 yr. old daughter, Allison H. says that she shows love by giving her brother a band-aid, when he needs one and by playing dolls with the girls, when they want to.

Spark mom, Stacey W. feels you must be supportive and show love by doing the little things like eating dinner together.

Her son, Dakota wants to tell others that it is good to give hugs. He also says that fixing breakfast for your mom is a good way to show love.

Jessica B., age 11, thinks you should tell your family you love them and help when someone is hurt.

Jodi W., age 18, suggests giving a present is a good way to show love and also feels you can show love by being respectful.

SPARK mom, Deborah W., lovingly says she prays continuously for each one of them and for their family unit. She suggests that parents should lead by example, admit their failures, repent and move on.

Leah W., age 15, says that you can show love by being more respectful and by planning to spend more time together as a family.

Spark mom, Tiffany N., shares that to show her children love, she can spend more time doing something they choose to do. She also states that she can cook their favorite meal for them to show love. Her 10 yr. old son, Tashawn, says he can show more respect to his family. He can also show love when he obeys his mom. 3 yr. old, Bri, thinks she shows more love when she doesn't yell at her brother and listens to her mommy the first time.

Two ways, Spark mom, Aimee H. shows love for her children, are to cook a nice meal for them and to spend time playing a game together. Her daughter Taylor, 14, says she can tell her family how much they mean to her and give them hugs. Gabe, 10, shares the idea of taking his mom and sister out to eat when he has money. He also feels like he can show love by being nice when they are playing a game together.

PHONE CAMPAIGN

In May our Phone Campaign staff will begin calling each donor. However, if you wish to mail a gift in early, we will pull your name from our call list, thus saving us the cost of a phone call. Please look within yourselves prayerfully and consider how you might bless the children.

Thank you for your continued prayers and support!
